It will be impossible for me within the limits of a letter to answer or question to the bill of any real use to you.

The proposal that has been made for Home rule in Ireland is for a return of powers to the old Constitution of the parliament before the Union. This of course involves the re-establishment of the House of Lords.

I myself am convinced the future question is a bad one. It has gone thro' Parliament. I think you will find full information in it - if it is not by mail. I have not a copy but I think by Morley & Howard I can have one sent to you.

I will also request the Secretary of the Home Secretary also to send you any papers he may have calculated to give information as to the Bill & point out any difficulties I find in it. I will write you again & so on

Yours very faithfully,

Edward Bull

My dear Mr Wilson:-

A friend has sent me a copy of a paper containing some very kind remarks made by you in Longford with reference to myself. I have to thank you very heartily for the spirit they evince, and to assure you that I value them highly. I care little for the attacks of the enemy, but I am to a great deal of sensitiveness with reference to the good opinion of my friends, and foremost amongst these in the County of Longford I have always esteemed yourself and Mr Parnell.

This is probably the last letter which I shall write from this side of the water, where I have been engaged, ever since I landed, in a very strenuous effort to arrange for the necessary funds for the movement. The times are bad, and there have been other difficulties; but I believe a good commencement has been made, and I am encouraged to hope that, unless some new trouble should arise amongst ourselves, we may, spite of all drawbacks, prevent the movement from collapsing from want of means.

Hoping before many months to have the pleasure of seeing you in Longford,

Believe me,

Yours faithfully,

Joseph Wilson Esq.,
Longford, Ireland.

Edward Blake

P.S. Pray convey my kind remarks to Mr Parnell.
