1912 (April 11) James Morton painting of Titanic passing the Fastnet
Oil on canvas painting of R.M.S. Titanic passing Fastnet Rock Lighthouse on her maiden voyage in 1912, attractively framed. Painted by James Morton an artist and illustrator renowned for the historical accuracy of his maritime and aviation scenes and whose works are much sought after. A similar painting by the same artist was sold by Whyte's in April 2012 (realised €5,600). This example however shows the famous ship in a different position, closer to the shore and with the Fastnet more prominent. Together with a copy of an Irish Times article from 1987 showing the artist and painting. 20 x 30in. (51 x 76cm)
€2,000-€3,000 (£1,670-£2,500 approx)

James MacDonald oil painting: Britannic at Sail

HMHS Britannic was the third and largest Olympic-class ocean liner of the White Star Line. She was the sister ship of RMS Olympic and RMS Titanic, and was intended to enter service as a transatlantic passenger liner. She was launched just before the start of the First World War and was laid up at her builders in Belfast for many months before being put to use as a hospital ship in 1915. She was shaken by an explosion, caused by an underwater mine, in the Kea Channel off the Greek island of Kea on the morning of 21 November 1916, and sank with the loss of 30 lives.

36 x 48in. (91 x 122cm)
